

China's New Child Law – level 1

China changed one of its laws. This law now says that married people can have three children. Before, couples could only have two children. This is because statistics show that the Chinese population is growing very slowly.

This change in the child law happened before. In 2016, China changed the law to say people can have two children. Before 2016 couples could only have 1 child. It was called the one-child policy.

It is very expensive to live in a city in China. Many people do not want to have families, so nobody knows if people will actually have more children.
